When it comes to grief, there is no magic answer. No solution. No cure. Grief is an individual experience that can only be processed by the person working to cope with it. Although there's no quick fix to grief, there's time-honored wisdom that can support coping and promote acceptance.

Here are 7 things that can help in processing grief and dealing with loss:

1. Grief comes in waves and can be heightened during moments like anniversaries or holidays. Ensuring you have the extra support from professionals, family, and friends can help you process, cope, and move forward.

2. As people, we want to avoid pain at all cost, but we’re stronger than we think we are. We not only learn our capacity to deal with hurt and pain by experiencing it, we grow from it too. Resiliency is one of the best practices to help cope with grief.

3. Grief is exhausting and taking care of yourself is important. Giving yourself time for rest, nourishing meals, laughter, and exercise will help you be ready to continue the journey vital to coping with your grief and loss. Remember, you deserve it.

4. Grief is not something you experience and simply get over. Grief moves in cycles. If you’re feeling “okay” and then feel bad again, it doesn’t mean you relapsed or worsened. It means you’re human and are actually moving forward in your process. Your grief is yours, no questions asked.

5. Anger, sadness, hurt—your feelings of grief are yours and, more importantly, they’re normal. Losing someone (including yourself) challenges how you should feel compounds the experience and prohibits coping, resiliency or growth. Everyone comes to their loss experience with their own story, their own unique context and their own meaning.

6. Believe it or not, grief can create meaning in your life. There’s no getting over the loss of a loved one, but, in that loss, you can glean new purpose for your life as you cope with your grief. Connect to what gives you meaning, like a passion project, your family history or even helping others whose experienced grief themselves. Doing so will provide you with your grief and help you build strength.

7. Although grief is individual, you’re not alone. There are support systems in every corner of the state. Whether it’s a behavioral health or medical professional like a counselor or doctor, a long-time family friend, a grief support group or the G.A.P. Network, there are avenues where you can build your resilience and coping with your loss in the best way for you.

This document provides seven things that can help in processing grief and dealing with loss.
From Research to Recovery 2020: Racial Disparity, Social Justice and the Opioid Crisis

The ADAMHS Board is proudly supporting this webinar series taking place from August-November to bring together a diverse group of stakeholders to address how the opioid crisis is impacting communities of color, particularly Black Americans, who have been disproportionately stigmatized and incarcerated for substance use. The specific goal of this webinar series is to create meaningful conversations and collaborations to address the structural racism preventing communities of color from receiving treatment, recovery, and wraparound social services for substance use disorders.

Structural racism and substance use are intertwined through a combination of inequitable systems, and this webinar series will consequently be examining a range of topics related to healthcare and criminal justice.

Learn more about each webinar and how to register here. The first webinar is coming up on August 22.

The Next ADAMHS Board Virtual Client Information Meeting is Coming Up on August 27

The ADAMHS Board is hosting a virtual client information meeting on Thursday, August 27 from 1:00-2:00 p.m. We respectfully ask that this meeting only be attended by clients. At this meeting, a representative from the MetroHealth System will be sharing tips on taking care of your mental health during the COVID-19 pandemic; ways to recognize symptoms, triggers, and how to support oneself while isolated. Click here to view the flyer.

Clients can join the meeting by video using a computer or smartphone. If using a smartphone, download the free Zoom app. Click here to join the meeting on a computer or smartphone. If you would like to join the meeting by phone, dial (301) 715-8592. You will be asked to enter the meeting ID: 838 7380 6302.

All virtual client meeting updates, including topics and any meeting changes, can be found on our website at www.adamhscc.org.
For Our Media Partners

While Ohio and the rest of the nation continues to work hard to mitigate the spread of COVID-19, the "epidemics within the pandemic" – opioid overdoses and deaths resulting from suicide – persists. We would like to remind members of the media who cover these important topics that responsible reporting on suicide has the power to save lives. How you shape a story, the details given, words used and resources provided, will minimize suicide contagion for vulnerable individuals and increase awareness of this major public health issue.

We encourage you to share the below resources and guides with your entire newsroom.

- Reporting on Suicide
- Reporting on Opioids

Also, please continue to share the following resources with your readers/viewers:

Controlling Exposure to Social Media Vital to Mental Health

From a global pandemic to the movement to end racial inequality in our country, along with an endless amount of political issues and divisiveness, we're living in a particularly contentious time in history. It's easy to feel overwhelmed by information, opinions and arguments, and nowhere is this more apparent than on social media. The Ohio State University Wexner Medical Center surveyed 2,000 people nationally and found that more Americans are making adjustments to their social media usage. More than half said they've changed their social media habits this year, with one in five making a point to take breaks from these platforms altogether. To read the complete article, click here.

Coronavirus (COVID-19) Updates

Governor DeWine Released Minority Health Strike Force Report and Executive Response: Governor DeWine released the final Minority Health Strike Force report and the state’s executive response. The Minority Health Strike Force was formed in April to examine the disproportionate impact of the coronavirus on minority communities, as well as broader health disparities and racial injustices. Currently, African Americans represent 14 percent of Ohio’s population but are 24 percent of positive COVID-19 cases, 32 percent of COVID-19 hospitalizations, and 19 percent of COVID-19 deaths in Ohio. Similarly, at least 6 percent of those who have tested positive for COVID-19 in Ohio are Latino, despite only representing 3.9 percent of Ohio’s population. The COVID-19 Minority Health Strike Force Blueprint lists 34 recommendations on dismantling racism, removing public health obstacles, improving the social/economic and physical environments, and strengthening data collection to better track disparities.

Face Shields in Schools: As schools get ready to start the 2020-21 academic year, the Ohio Department of Health is following federal guidance and prohibiting the schoolwide use of face shields as a substitute for facial coverings/masks. Such use of face shields does not comply with the Director’s Order Requiring the Use of Facial Coverings in Child Education Settings.
