

COACHING

Instructional Coaching

Many districts are leveraging the leadership within their system to drive instructional improvement. A number of districts have started utilizing instructional coaches. Whether it be reading, mathematics, technology, or behavior, instructional coaches have been tasked to collaborate with classroom teachers to help improve student growth and achievement. However, what instructional coaching model is right for the situation? What is the role of the instructional coach within the overall structure of the system? How does an instructional coach leverage his/her abilities to facilitate improvements in the classroom?

The Instructional Coaching Network is a monthly, 1-hour virtual network for instructional coaches or anyone invested in coaching teaching.

The network covers how to establish a framework for instructional coaching followed by prioritizing content, identifying the needs of the adult, and meeting the needs of teachers based on the coach's role.

The Network provides a time and space for instructional coaches to collaborate with one another, share resources, and get feedback from
