THURSDAY MARCH 9 2017

Michael Maloney, Chief Compliance Officer for eSchoolView, will provide insight into what districts should be doing and answer questions like . . .

Where do I begin?

- How do I know if my school website is ADA compliant?

- What are the rules/regulations in place that school districts must follow?

- Are there audits that can be run on our site to see what needs to be fixed?

- How do we prioritize the most pressing issues that should be addressed first?

The U.S. Department of Education for Civil Rights (OCR) has been reviewing hundreds of cases to determine if school district websites are compliant with the American Disabilities Act (ADA). Making an ADA-compliant school website is a popular topic lately. School boards, administrators, communication directors, and technology directors are struggling to comprehend exactly what they need to do.
