Having clarity for learning is more important than ever as teachers work to accelerate learning and close learning goals. With this ever-changing landscape, teachers and leaders often find themselves overwhelmed as they search for clarity of instructional priorities.

- A focus on the instructional process for achieving teacher / student clarity in the K-12 classroom.
- An understanding of the components necessary to engage students in their own learning in the classroom through learning intentions, success criteria and opportunities to respond and feedback.
- Engagement of teachers in a reflective practice of assessing their impact on student learning.

This workshop is based on:

The Teacher Clarity Playbook written by Doug Fisher, Nancy Fry, Olivia Almador and Joseph Asof

Engagement by Design written by Doug Fisher and Nancy Fisher

Clarity for Learning written by John T. Almarode and Kara L. Vandas
