Holocaust and Human Behavior with Violins of Hope

How is history shaped by hatred, indifference, and denial, as well as by caring, compassion, and responsibility? In this 2-day workshop, we will examine the range of choices that led to the failure of democracy in Germany and ultimately to the persecution of millions of Jews and other targeted groups. In these workshops you will:

- ⇒ Discover interdisciplinary teaching and literacy strategies and classroom activities that reinforce historical and literacy skills
- ⇒ Experience how Facing History supports school culture and academic rigor as we spotlight our work with Cleveland Independent Schools
- ⇒ Receive a free copy of Facing History's Holocaust and Human Behavior as well as lessons to prepare your class for a Violins of Hope museum visit.
- ⇒ Become a part of the Facing History Educator Network, with access to a rich slate of educator resources, including downloadable unit and lesson plans, study guides, and online tools

Teaching Civil Rights through Historical Investigations

By studying the choices that led to critical episodes in history, students learn how issues of identity and membership, ethics and judgment have meaning today. In this workshop we will explore ways to engage students in the issues raised by the American civil rights movement.

- ⇒ Learn how to use Facing History's rigorous and engaging teaching strategies and primary sources to help align with Common Core State Standards and Social Emotional Learning objectives
- ⇒ Receive a free copy of Facing History's Civil Rights Historical Investigations Unit and Common Core Writing Prompts and Strategies: A Supplement to Civil Rights Historical Investigations
- ⇒ Become a fully qualified Facing History teacher and receive free access to our resource collections
- ⇒ 1 Graduate Credit available for a fee from John Carroll University

The Reconstruction Era & the Fragility of Democracy

How does society rebuild after extraordinary division and trauma, when the ideals and values of the democracy are most vulnerable? This workshop explores the Reconstruction era in the United States and the construction of American identity.

- ⇒ Discover new interdisciplinary Common Core - aligned teaching strategies that reinforce historical and literacy skills and meet Social Emotional Learning objectives
- ⇒ Explore themes such as identity, historical memory, justice, and civic participation in a democracy
- ⇒ Receive a free copy of Facing History's teaching unit: The Reconstruction Era and the Fragility of Democracy
- ⇒ Become a fully qualified Facing History teacher and receive free access to our resource collections
- ⇒ 1 Graduate Credit available for a fee from John Carroll University
