College enrollment for historically underrepresented men of color at highly selective institutions has been decreasing over the last several years. The share of Black freshmen at elite schools is virtually unchanged since 1980 (New York Times Aug 25 2017).

Although students of color now constitute more than half of all public school students, from 1987 – 2012 the share of the nation's teaching force constituted by minorities grew by only 5% (The State of Teacher Diversity in American Education (Albert Shanker institute, 2015)).

- ◆ Clarification of the selective admissions process from a highly selective institution
- ◆ Explanation of opportunities in the College of Education and Human Ecology for underrepresented male students of color at a highly selective institution.

◆ What are the myths around admission to The Ohio State University?

◆ What is the process for admittance and how might we better connect underrepresented groups?

◆ What can counselors do to prepare underrepresented students of color for admission?

◆ What supports are available from Ohio State University?

◆ How can districts partner with Ohio State University?

◆ What current opportunities exist?

◆ How can we better market education as a profession to underrepresented students of color?
