

Using the New Can-Do Statements for Intercultural Communication

August 11, 2017

Presented by: Kathy Shelton, World Language Education Program Specialist, Ohio Department of Education

How can teachers help learners develop their cultural knowledge and communication skills while maintaining use of the target language? This summer the newly created Can-Do Statements for Intercultural Communication and the newly updated Can-Do Statements for Language will be published by NCSSFL-ACTFL. Explore these new Can-Do statements and how they provide a framework for goal setting, lesson building and student reflection. Self-assess your own intercultural competence in English and in a target language and reflect on how you integrate cultural opportunities for your learners. Then, use the new Can-Do Statements to create sample cultural lessons, activities and reflections in the target language, aligned to your learners' proficiency level. Please bring a laptop. (Note: Participants will be provided with a sample copy of both sets of the new Can-Do statements.)
