Mental Health & Suicide Prevention Programs Featuring Youth-Led Initiatives

Suicide can touch anyone. Suicide can be so difficult to understand. Suicide knows no boundaries—male, female, young, old, all ethnicities and backgrounds. But together we can help stop the stigma that surrounds depression, mental health concerns, suicidal thoughts and actions.

As part of Suicide Prevention Awareness Month, please join us for an informational session featuring:

◆ Ivan Juzang: *The Be Present Campaign

OMHAS will soon be launching a statewide social marketing campaign that empowers young people to step up and help peers, friends, classmates and siblings deal with issues like depression, stress, anger, loneliness, bullying, anxiety, or harassment. This is an effort to significantly reduce the number of completed and attempted suicides in our state.

The Be Present Campaign information session is an opportunity to see and hear why galvanizing support for the mental and emotional wellness of our youth is so important—and how you and your organization can be part of the solution!

◆ Andrea Floro: *LifeAct

LifeAct delivers a lifesaving suicide prevention educational program to Northeast Ohio middle schools & high schools. Our trained, caring instructors teach teens to recognize the warning signs of depression and suicide, empowering them to come forward to seek professional help for themselves or others.
